LOGLINE A killer emerges from a coma to bait the only cop disgraced enough to see past the lies and into the eye of the evil that binds them both.

SYNOPSIS Jude Cavendish is off suspension and back on the force with his tail tucked between his legs. But the shame of his disgrace isn't over yet – he's been called back as a scapegoat. One last interview on the career-killing impossible case no one else is willing to take.

All Jude knows now is that the cold thread he had been following that got him dismissed has just gotten very, very hot. Dr. Gerry Poole, a witness with persuasive information, has surfaced with proof that they put the wrong man behind bars.

And all the evidence now points to Poole. But it's impossible – utterly impossible. Because Poole was in a coma at the time of the murders. Then Cavendish hears a story of human obsessions and demonic possessions and his sense of reality is under siege.

Now Cavendish is trapped with more at stake than his job and reputation. This investigation has demands of its own and something more evil than curiosity will need to be satisfied.

One broken cop must remember that he used to be a hunter – but the devil has tricks of his own.
